

CHARLES BECKER'S SENT TO PRISON IN DEATH HEAVYING HIS GUILT

Former New York Lieutenant of Police Is Electrocuted for the Killing of Gambler Herman Rosenthal

SHOCK SENT THROUGH BODY AS HE PRAYED

Dies With Photo of Wife Pinned Over His Heart—Wrote Statement Denying Guilt Shortly Before Execution

LONG SING PRISON, OSSINGTON, N. Y., July 30.—Charles Becker was put to death in the electric chair here this morning for the killing of Herman Rosenthal, a New York gambler. Becker, a former New York police lieutenant, was in his composure and protested his innocence to the last. He went to his death with a photograph of his wife pinned on his shirt over his heart. Three shocks were given before the prison physician pronounced Becker dead at 5:05 o'clock.

Becker led the way to his own execution. The condemned man sat up all night on the edge of his cot, calmly talking to Deputy Warden Charles H. Johnson.

"I have got to face it," said Becker, "and I am going to meet it quietly and without trouble to any one."

The deputy warden came to the cell at four o'clock before the time for the execution. He found Becker sitting at his table, with the priest, Father W. J. Connelley, who had been sent to the prison from New York, came to administer the last rites. They found the man sitting at his table, with his face resting on his hand, gazing at the prison floor.

Shortly after 5 o'clock when the first of the witnesses came to the place of execution in a death house, Becker was put to death about a year ago for the killing of Rosenthal. Deputy Warden Johnson, who had been sent to the prison from New York, came to administer the last rites. They found the man sitting at his table, with his face resting on his hand, gazing at the prison floor.

Becker rose to his feet when he saw the priest, and he walked to the altar. He took a small book from his pocket and he began to read. He read the words of the prayer book, and he prayed. He prayed for himself and for his wife. He prayed for his friends and for his enemies. He prayed for all the people of the world.

FOR THE RAILROADS ENDEAVORING TO FOR THE RAILROADS

Attorneys King & Spaulding, counsel for the North Georgia Mineral Railway company, which is seeking a charter for the construction of a railroad between Atlanta and Cartersville and which road is generally known as the "Georgia Road," have made a formal demand upon the State of Georgia that it issue the road a charter.

The North Georgia Mineral railway is the proposed line with which it is generally believed the Louisville and Nashville wish to parallel the Western and Atlantic railroad, the latter road, it is understood that the new road has already been purchased practically all of its right of way between Atlanta and Cartersville and that it has secured terminus in this city.

Application for a charter for the North Georgia Mineral railway was filed with the secretary of state on October 5, last year, but there was so much opposition to the granting of the charter that Attorney King & Spaulding agreed with Governor Slaton not to press their application until the general assembly met this year.

BILLS OPPOSE CHARTER.—The senate which have for their object the preventing of the construction of a railroad to parallel the Western and Atlantic road, the latter road, it is understood that the new road has already been purchased practically all of its right of way between Atlanta and Cartersville and that it has secured terminus in this city.

Russians Flee Polish Fortress As Austro-German Forces Advance Upon Capital in Overwhelming Numbers

With Fall of Warsaw, It Is Believed, Kaiser Will Throw Many New Troops Into Fighting in West

(By Associated Press.)
LONDON, July 30.—Warsaw, the third city of Russia and the goal for which the German army has been striving since October, is at least in the throes of abandonment, German forces in overwhelming numbers are at the gates of the Polish capital and dispatches from the city itself and from Petrograd say that further resistance would be unavailing.

Discontent, not only through France and Great Britain, but in Russia itself, the fall of the city is expected hourly, and the problem now is to move the Russian armies intact, threatened as they are from the south by the Austro-Germans and more seriously from the north, where the German forces are aiming at the city itself and from Petrograd.

This latter message, the British press admits, is imminent, and hope in the allied countries now is for the continued maintenance of the Russian army.

SENATE DEMANDS NEW SOLDIERS' HOME PROBE

Lost Prohibition Bills Slipped Into Senator Harbin's Desk Friday

(By Associated Press.)
Friday was a busy day in the senate. The three lost or stolen prohibition bills were found.

A senate committee of five was appointed to investigate conditions at the Confederate Soldiers' home near Atlanta. The committee is being satisfied with the investigation made recently by the house.

A bill by Senator Eaker was passed providing that no life-term prisoner shall be granted clemency or a parole until he shall have served at least ten years, and then, in case the prisoner shall have already been the recipient of executive clemency, it is to be allowed to occupy such others as may remain.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE BILL IS DEBATED BY WOMEN

Measure Pending in House is Argued Two Hours Before
Committee

Before the constitutional amendments committee and audience of one hundred and fifty women, the Atkinson woman suffrage bill was debated two hours Thursday afternoon in the house of representatives. Three women spoke for the bill and two spoke against it. The committee postponed its recommendation until Tuesday.

Mrs. Frances Hoke Smith Whitehead, of Atlanta, was the first speaker for suffrage. She was followed by Mrs. Elliott Cheatham, formerly of Atlanta, now of Washington, D. C., who came here especially to speak for "the cause." Mrs. William H. Felton, of the Georgia Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage. She was followed by Mrs. W. D. Lamar, of Macon, who also spoke against suffrage.

Mrs. William H. Felton, of Cartersville, over eighty years old, concluded the final argument for the suffragists in rebuttal to the propositions of the "anti's."

Chairman Shelby Myrick, of the constitutional amendments committee, who presided at first ruled that there should be no applause, but later, at the request of committee, set aside the ban on clapping and feminine cries resounded at intervals throughout the debate.

"A man can't be a Colonial dame, nor can a man join the Woman's Christian Temperance union," said Mrs. W. D. Lamar. "Why should we demand equal rights with men? They can't possibly have equal rights with us; there are many organizations and other things that belong exclusively to women that men can't get into; why should we want to invade their province?"

WOMEN ALWAYS RIGHT. Mrs. Whitehead said that women were always on the side of morals, and would vote right on all questions upon which the advancement of the human race depended.

"On woman depends the preservation of the human race," she said. "And women should have equal rights with men and should work side by side with men in all things."

Mrs. Whitehead said that she much applauded the former as "they," and the latter as "we." "They say that men won't give women what they want—we say that, when men have given women their hearts, their hands and their money, they have no more to give."

They say the divine right of protection of women rests in women—we say that it rests in men, where it has always rested.

"They like the lime-light of politics; we shun it. I do not want to see women in politics. I want to see women remain in that sphere which God has created her."

The glare of public life burns up the finer sensibilities of women, and leaves her an unsexed mongrel.

Mrs. Elliott Cheatham delivered a strong plea for suffrage.

"Women," she said, "struggle for all that is best in the advancement of civilization. They are for the home, for schools and for sanitation. For such

JUDGE STARK STAYS ON TEMPERANCE COMMITTEE

Chairman Threatened to Re-sign
Because of Delayed
Action on Bills

The little flurry occasioned in the house by the rumor that Representative W. W. Stark, of Jackson, would resign as chairman of the house temperance committee because he was discouraged over getting his committee to report out the several prohibition bills pending before it, seems to have blown over.

Judge Stark announced Friday that the situation appeared to be clearing up, and that as the result of conference with several members of the temperance committee it was his opinion that some agreement would be reached for reporting one or more of the bills by Monday. With this expectation he had called a meeting of the committee for 9 o'clock Monday morning. It is the desire of Judge Stark to have his committee make its report before Tuesday as on that day it is expected the senate will take the prohibition bills pending before it, and Judge Stark did not want all of the house bills to still be in committee when the senate had disposed of theirs.

Judge Stark attributes the delay in the report of the house temperance committee largely to the attitude manifested before the committee by certain Atlanta prohibitionists, which he says, muddled the situation and offended some members of the committee.

BOY SLAYS A WOMAN; FLEEING FROM POSSE

She Complained of His Killing
Her Geese and He Fired

JACKSON, Ky., July 30.—Mrs. Granville Williams was shot and killed yesterday at her home on Quicker road, near here, and today a sheriff's posse is pursuing Amos Fugate, a 19-year-old boy, who is believed to have shot her.

According to the sheriff, Fugate shot Mrs. Williams when she complained of his having shot two of her geese.

Two years ago Fugate was tried for the killing of William Coombs, but was acquitted.

measures they should have the right to vote.

"We are not asking you members of the committee and the legislature to give us that right; we are only asking you to pass this bill to put it up to the people of Georgia so that by their sovereign power, can vote as to whether or not they will let our constitution to enfranchise the women of Georgia."

Mrs. William H. Felton spoke eloquently, and received round after round of applause.

"I have heard it said that women are too hysterical to enter politics. What do you think of the way men behave at national conventions? I have heard it said that ballots were substitutes for muskets. Who makes the soldier but the woman?"

Mr. Felton scored the "anti's" in biting sarcasm.

CHARGE DISCRIMINATION. At the close of the hearing Thursday, Mrs. W. H. Felton, speaking for the suffragists, stated they had apparently been discriminated against by the chair in favor of the anti-suffragists, and that all of the women had been treated rather thoughtlessly.

Mrs. Felton called attention to the fact that the women on both factions had been told to come at 2:30 o'clock to appear before the committee. She pointed out that they were there then, but that they had to wait an hour and a half, until 4 o'clock, until after the committee had heard arguments for and against the proposed Lanier county.

Mrs. Felton pointed out that the committee chairman announced that the sides would be limited to half an hour each, giving each of the three suffragist speakers ten minutes and each of the two "anti's" fifteen minutes. Also she announced that there should be no applause.

She pointed out that Mrs. Whitehead spoke for ten minutes, leaving to the rule, and that some slight applause for her speech, worthy of much applause, was frowned down by the chair. Then, Mrs. Felton, Mrs. Elliott Cheatham delivered a fine speech, lasting just ten minutes, before an audience enforcedly silent.

However, Mrs. Felton said, when Miss Rutherford, the first of the "anti's" speakers, arose to address the audience, Chairman Myrick announced that the rule as to applause was suspended. Then Mrs. Rutherford spoke thirty minutes. Instead of ten, and was not "called" by the chair. Mrs. Felton declared after Mrs. W. D. Lamar spoke thirty minutes by the clock, as timed by suffragists without interruption from the chair.

After this, Mrs. Felton, the last suffragist speaker, arose and delivered a speech, which was greeted with applause, and which lasted between twenty-five and thirty minutes, despite a suggestion from the chair that the speech was to be limited to ten minutes. Mrs. Felton said she spoke longer than ten minutes purposely.

FINDS A CURE FOR PELLAGRA Harvey, La.—Mrs. S. W. Spruell, of this place, writes: "I suppose it will be a great pleasure to you to know that you cured my child. She had pellagra very bad and the doctor said she would not get well. She is well of pellagra and looks fine."

"You may use this letter as a testimonial if you wish. Great benefit have you done my daughter, Minnie Abrams." There is no longer any doubt that pellagra can be cured. Don't delay until it is too late. It is your duty to consult the successful treatment. The symptoms—hands red like sunburn, skin peeling off, sore mouth, the lips, throat and tongue a flaming red, with much mucus and choking; indigestion and nausea, either diarrhoea or constipation.

There is hope, get Baughn's big Free book on Pellagra and learn about the remedy for Pellagra that has at last been found. Address: Amos Baughn, Remedy Co., Box 2002, Jasper, Ala. Remembering money is refunded in any case where the remedy fails to cure.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My head broke out with blisters which were as large as my thumbnail. It itched and I scratched, and scales came. My head itched and burned so that I could not do my work. I combed out handfuls of hair, and when I would comb my head it would bleed and burn so bad till I would cry. It left my head and went down my back and under my arms and all over my breast. I had the trouble four years."

"My sister told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I would wash my head with hot water and Cuticura Soap and let the lather dry in. Then I would apply the Cuticura Ointment. Cuticura Soap and Ointment gave me relief in a week and in six months my head was clear of the trouble. I was healed." (Signed) Miss Verne Croul, Livermore, Ky., Jan. 1, 1915.

CHARLES BECKER IS SENT TO HIS DEATH DENYING HIS GUILT

the foul crime for which I must die. You are now about to witness my destruction by the state which is organized to protect the lives of the innocent. May Almighty God pardon every one who has contributed in any degree to my untimely death. And now on the brink of my grave I declare to the world that I am proud to have been the husband of the purest, noblest woman of our age—Helen Becker. This acknowledgment is the only legacy I can leave her. I bid you all good-by. Father, I am ready to go. Amen.

(Signed) "CHARLES BECKER."

After his wife had said farewell shortly after midnight Becker maintained a casual conversation with Deputy Warden Johnson, who sat beside the screen in front of his cell. Sometimes he smoked cigars, after which he would let his head fall upon his hand and gaze reflectively at the concrete floor for minutes at a time. Then he would find the edge of his cell carefully pinning a photograph of his wife on his white shirt just over his heart. Then, as if he desired to have her all to himself, Becker put on a thin black alpaca coat which he tightly buttoned. The photograph was not seen by the witness until the prison physician opened his coat as he sat in the death chair.

NEGRO FOLLOWS BECKER.

Becker was put to death by the state executioner, whose name is unknown to the public. This man succeeded State Electrician Davis, and he said he did not take the job unless his name was kept secret. He lived a little less than a year and went about his work briskly. Becker's executioner said that in his opinion the man had died instantly at the first contact.

An autopsy was performed, according to law, immediately after the execution. After Becker's body had been removed from the chair Samuel Haynes, a negro murderer, was brought into the execution room and electrocuted. One of Becker's last requests to Warden Osborne was that he be put to death before the negro.

Mrs. Becker's last effort to save her husband was made yesterday when she appealed personally to Governor Whitman for a reprieve so that an appeal might be taken to the state court of appeals. Missing the governor at Albany, Mrs. Becker met him at Peachtree-keepsie. The plea was fruitless and the untimely wife hurried to Sing Sing to bid her husband farewell. She was with him for an hour, leaving the death house at 12:30 o'clock this morning. She left soon afterwards for New York, outwardly displaying no efforts of the severe mental strain. John Becker, her brother-in-law, and John Lynch, her brother, accompanied her.

A lengthy statement to Governor Whitman was given out by Becker late yesterday. Becker reiterated his innocence, and declared he never had offered to plead guilty to second degree murder.

MRS. BECKER'S STATEMENT.

A statement credited to Mrs. Becker was given out here shortly after her husband's death.

"I shall never rest," she was quoted as saying, "until I have exposed the methods which were used to convict my husband. Whether he was guilty or innocent, I was not a justifiable murderer. The means employed to convict him are to me, more than those of Charles. No one can take his place. In all the twenty years of our married life, I never had occasion once to regret that I was his wife."

"Charles was no angel. He made no pretense of being one. He was just an ordinary human being and perhaps that is why I loved him so."

Dr. W. O. Stillman, of Auburn, who assisted in the autopsy, said that Becker showed unusual resistance to the electric fluid. After the autopsy Dr. Stillman said:

"I noticed no unusual effects upon Becker's vital organs. The way he resisted the strong current was remarkable, showing him to be an unusually powerful man."

It was expected that Becker's body would be removed some time today to New York, where funeral services probably will be held on Sunday.

LETTER TO GOVERNOR.

In his letter to Governor Whitman, Becker again reiterated his innocence of the crime for which he has been convicted.

"To these charges and to all others I answer, the letter read, 'by repeating solemnly on the brink of the world to which you are sending me, that the time what was my constant answer while in the world: I am innocent as you of having murdered Herman Rosen, that, or of having conspired, procured or aided his murder or having any knowledge of that dreadful crime.'"

The alleged statements which Becker referred to as having been made by the governor were that he had offered to plead guilty of murder in the second degree; that, quoting from Becker's letter he "had offered to give testimony against several persons (whose names are undisclosed) of having shared with me in collecting money from law-breakers; that he had not consented to two men arrested for complicity in the Rosen murder and that 'with a cruelty almost inconceivable it is stated that my first wife died under circumstances warranting suspicion that I caused her death.'"

Becker explained the death of his first wife by declaring that she had died of "hasty consumption" and that no breath of suspicion had ever been raised against him in that connection.

"ABLE TO DESTROY ME."

"And well, sir, these words of mine," the letter concluded, "when your power passes, then the truth of Rosen's murder will become known. But not while your nominees remain district attorneys and can hold the club over these persons."

"With the aid of judges who were misled into misconceiving the testimony offered in my trial and into mistaking it both to the jury and on appeal, you have proved yourself able to destroy my life. But, believe me, I will surrender without rancor. Not all the judges in this state, nor in this country, nor the governor of this state, nor the district attorney, nor all of them combined can destroy permanently the character of an innocent man."

Mrs. Becker Returns to Her Home in the Bronx

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, July 29.—Returning from her last visit to the death house at Sing Sing prison where she had taken her farewell of her husband, Mrs. Charles Becker arrived at the Becker home in the Bronx at 2:40 a. m. today. She was accompanied by one of Becker's brothers, who half carried her into the house. Mrs. Becker showed evidences of the deep distress she was undergoing. No effort was made to question her about her visit to Sing Sing. She was met by her sister, Miss Mary Lynch. Mrs. Becker, according to her brother, John Lynch, was bearing up well today, after the strain she underwent yesterday and last night. Mrs. Becker is resting at her home today and is not expected to see any one except members of her family.

An undertaker was dispatched today to Ossining to get the body of Charles Becker. The funeral, it was announced, will take place Monday. A solemn high requiem mass will be said at the Church of St. Nicholas of Tolentine by the Rev. Nicholas J. Murray. Interment will be at Woodhull cemetery.

CONDEMNED MEXICANS ALLOWED TO APPEAL

PHOENIX, Ariz., July 30.—By vacating his own order, denying a writ of habeas corpus in the case of four Mexicans, condemned to be hanged today in the state penitentiary at Florence, Judge McAllister, of the superior court, opened the way for an appeal to the state supreme court which will serve as a stay of execution at least until September, when that tribunal reconvenes.

Action was taken after it was shown his earlier order denying the writ yesterday prevented an appeal that would act as a stay. The Mexicans were charged with the murder of four white persons at Ray, Ariz.

FULTON COUNTY BOARD PRAISED BY DR. KNAPP

Chief of Farm Extension Work
Appreciates Attitude of Co-operation

Dr. Bradford Knapp, chief of the federal department of agriculture, spent Thursday in Atlanta, in conference with agents of the agriculture department concerning the work in Georgia. He left Atlanta Friday morning for Auburn, Ala., and from there will travel to the Pacific coast, through Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas.

The board of commissioners of Fulton county is to be complimented for having accepted the government's offer to share the expense of employing a farm demonstration agent and a home economic instructor in Fulton county, said Dr. Knapp. "The people of the county, the business men of Atlanta no less than the farmers of the rural districts, are to be congratulated upon having such an up-to-date, progressive board administering the business of the county. The returns from the employment of the agents will more than justify the wisdom of the commissioners and commend the people for the small annual outlay in salaries."

Dr. Knapp is in direct charge of all farm demonstration work in the south, having under him 15 states. His word is supreme in matters pertaining to farm demonstration activities, and also to the extension work under the terms of the Smith-Lever bill. All of the funds expended by the federal government in the fifteen states are distributed under the direction of Dr. Knapp.

"I feel particularly gratified to know that the Georgia legislature has decided to accept the provision of the Smith-Lever agricultural extension act," said Dr. Knapp.

The action of the legislature will give to Georgia the rank to which she is entitled in the matter of extension work and the money expended in its interest. Only Texas of the southern states will occupy a place in front of Georgia; North Carolina, which has rank-

FREEMAN IN CHICAGO AT TIME OF DISASTER

Councilman Helped Rescue
Survivors After Steamer
Eastland Sank

Councilman George F. Freeman, who returned to Atlanta from Chicago Thursday, was a witness of the terrible scenes following the disaster to the steamer Eastland and aided in the work of rescue.

"It was like a great big watermelon," he said. "Holes were cut in the side to allow ladders to be lowered to the quarters where women and children were caught like rats in their holes. Divers were busy bringing up the bodies. One man dived and appeared with a woman. Looking at the face, he saw it was his wife. Later this man went crazy. I saw a mother and her baby brought up dead and hundreds of other horrible incidents."

Councilman Freeman stayed over Sunday aiding in the rescue work. The following Wednesday, in Cincinnati, he went into a motion picture show to see films of the disaster. Its horrors still fresh on his mind, he was overcome as they were reproduced on the screen and he had to leave the theater.

Dr. Knapp expressed a deep interest in the southeastern fair which is to be held in Atlanta next fall, and was high in his praise of the work of the state college of agriculture, at Athens.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY HAS TEN MORE DAYS TO WORK

Appropriations, W. & A., and Prohibition Bills Expected to Take Up Time

The general appropriation bill, the western and Atlantic railroad bills and the prohibition bills—these three measures bid fair to occupy the attention of the house for practically the remainder of the session.

The legislature will adjourn on August 11, which means ten legislative days remain after today, Friday.

The house will probably begin holding afternoon sessions next week in an effort to make up for lost time, but even this will hardly suffice to dispose of more than the three measures mentioned above.

The general appropriation bill is expected to take all of today, all of Saturday and perhaps all of Monday.

After the general appropriation bill comes the Western and Atlantic railroad matters. There are several bills to be considered and it will probably take the house three or four days to dispose of them.

This will leave only three or four days for prohibition, and if the various prohibition bills are placed on the calendar—which seems likely—it is altogether probable that the remainder of the session for as far as the house is concerned, will be consumed in disposing of them.

Meanwhile, many important measures in which there is much interest will be forced off the track. Among these are the land title bills, judicial procedure bills, bills abolishing fees and placing solicitors and other officials on salaries, bills providing for rotation of superior court judges, bills rearranging the system of distributing convicts over the state, indeterminate sentence bills, the labor union bills, state cotton warehouse bills, state highway commission bills, state auditor bill, bill exempting college endowments from taxation, several new county bills that have been favorably reported, school book bills and others too numerous to mention.

INMAN CALLS A "STRIKE" ON TAX COMMITTEE JOB

Mayor Wouldn't Let Chairman
Resign, So He Just Stays
Away From Meeting

Members of council declare that Councilman Edward H. Inman, of the Eighth ward, is on a strike.

Recently Mr. Inman tendered his resignation as chairman of the tax committee to Mayor Woodward.

The mayor declared he wouldn't accept the resignation and that Councilman Inman is the chairman of the committee until he (the mayor) accepts the resignation and appoints a new chairman, something he says he won't do.

Councilman Inman then announced that he was not worrying about the mayor, as he was through with the tax committee job.

Wednesday the committee was called together and Mr. Inman "struck."

At any rate, it was the first meeting since his resignation, and he was conspicuous by his absence.

COOLER WEATHER IS DUE TO ARRIVE NEXT WEEK

The hot spell which has hung over Atlanta recently will continue through Sunday, according to the weather man, with thunder storms and a change to cooler early next week.

The thermometer registered 85 degrees at its highest points Wednesday and Thursday. This temperature is not unusually high for the time of year and the weather man doesn't think any records will be made. Another maximum temperature of 95 was indicated Friday.

AD. MEN'S CLUB HOST TO GOVERNOR HARRIS

Chief Executive Delivers Address After Inauguration of New Officers

Governor Nat E. Harris was the guest of honor at the meeting of the Atlanta Ad. Men's club Thursday night at the Ansley hotel. The governor addressed the club members, following the inauguration of the club's new officers. These officers are:

Julian V. Boehm, president; Lindsey Hopkins, first vice president; Lewis Dennis Hicks, second vice president; J. H. Atchison, secretary and treasurer; Hubert Anderson, sergeant-at-arms.

"I should rather have a bootblack scolding the praise of a community in which I lived than to have the biggest man in it thundering anathemas at it," declared Governor Harris in his address. Continuing he said:

"Georgia at present is in a splendid condition; we have just completed the greatest crop in the history of the state, and at far less cost than ever before. At the end of this season our people will be in better shape than at any time in their history. Despite the war, Georgia has never had more glorious prospects, and we have more cause for smiling and for song now than ever before."

A brief resume of the work of the club was delivered by the retiring president, St. Elmo Massengale. Victor H. Krieshaber, of the club, paid a glowing tribute to the work accomplished under Mr. Massengale's leadership, declaring him the most progressive and efficient president the club has had. As a token of the club's esteem Mr. Massengale was presented with a handsome silver service.

LECTURES ON HEALTH DRAW BIG CROWDS

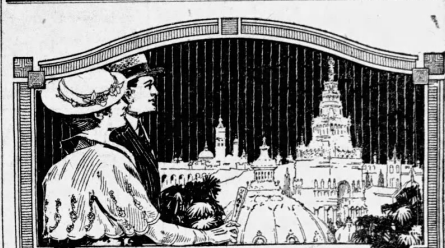

The first of the series of stereopticon lectures and motion picture exhibitions planned by the Atlanta Anti-Tuberculosis and Visiting Nurses' association for educational purposes along hygienic lines, was held last night on Bellwood avenue near the Coolidge Paint Works.

There was a large and interested crowd present and in addition to some splendid pictures, an instructive address along the lines presented in the pictures was delivered by the well known physician, Dr. W. A. Jackson. The entertainment will be continued at the same location tonight and Saturday night, when other prominent physicians will lecture.

STORYFRIVOLOUS DELL
(Copyright, 1915, by W. Werner.)

AKERTOWN is a small dell. It consists of some twelve or more lazy, straggling streets of pretty cottages, and green, flower bedded lawns—trim lawns, all of them. And the flower beds are neat and bright. There is quite a rivalry in Akertown over flower beds.

Perhaps it is because the town is so small that the people living in it are rather small minded, and much given to mistrusting and gossip. They are a fairly prosperous lot, according to urban ideas. Most of them either have owned farms or inherited land from their fathers, and have moved to town to make life easy. Most of them own their homes, and so have no rent to pay. They have chickens and gardens, and their cellars are full of canned fruit and meat salted down. So they have nothing much to do, and they have nothing much to talk about except each other. Naturally they talk about each other.

Since Mrs. Holby and her daughter Dell were the least prosperous (John Holby left a very poor, small farm, for which his widow was glad to take in exchange for a house and lot in town where she could get mending and washing to do), why, folks talked a great deal about them.

Dell was sixteen and frivolous. She was a pretty girl with exquisite dark blue eyes and very light brown hair, and she washed her hair entirely too often, folks said. She dressed gay, too. Some folks would have paid her mother more for the washing and mending which they needed had they not known that the extra money would go for silk stockings or a rhinestone bracelet for Dell.

Mrs. Holby thought, though, that the sun shone especially for Dell's sake. No one ever dared to insultate otherwise. Folks blamed Mrs. Holby afterward as much as they did Dell.

There wasn't much amusement in Akertown. Not even a moving picture show. Most drummers who came there got away again as soon as their crowd and raved because the next train was twelve hours off. Dell used to go down to the train nearly every day. So did the other young girls. Folks talked about them, especially Dell. The Baptist preacher even gave a very belated sermon upon the reprehensible habit.

Dell blushed that Sunday morning, but she giggled with all the blushing. And it was only a few weeks later that she ran away with a good-looking young drummer for the first time.

She left a note for her mother, Mrs. Holby faintly remembered the time she wrote to Dell and the drummer were counting away. The next week Dell wrote that she was living in Chicago, boarding for a few weeks until Harry got a position. In the excitement of stopping he had lost his samples and his job. However, Harry's father was very kind to them.

Mrs. Holby showed the letter around. Folks read it and made no comment, even though her wistful eyes begged for congratulations.

"I 'spect she'll be happy," said Dell's mother, valiantly. "Dell is a girl folks like. I'm sure he and his folks will be good to her."

Folks in Akertown turned away—and talked—and talked.

In the first place they doubted if Dell were married, and in the second place they knew that the "drummer" was no well-to-do father, and in the third place they knew that that father would not be kind to Dell. Who would refuse to get a girl like Dell, fifty-frivolous and vain, as an addition to his family? They had enough pity, though, not to urge suspicions that were almost belief on Dell's wistful, fearing mother, but they saw that she, too, had her doubts.

A year went by. Dell never came home. She wrote frequently, though. Her mother showed her letters to whoever cared to read them. Mrs. Holby's eyes were wistful. She seemed to be asking people to think charitably. And almost it was Akertown, they thought, uncharitably, and more often than it was necessary they asked Mrs. Holby when she was going to visit Dell.

"As soon as she gets settled," she answered, tremulously. "You see she is still staying with his folks, and I wouldn't feel exactly comfortable. I'd rather wait till my little girl is in her very own home."

Folks sniffed. There came once a very contrite, affectionate little letter from Dell. She wrote that she had suddenly realized what a selfish daughter she used to be. But she had never thought. Now she knew. She'd be different if she could go back and live her life over again.

"We thought she'd realize!" said Akertown, grimly.

"Dear little Dell!" said her mother as she showed the letter. "But she never appreciated herself. As if I'd buy her childish ways up against her!" And she folded the letter and put it away, as though it were something precious.

Presently Dell began to send her mother money—a great deal of money. She did not have to wash or mend any longer, wrote Dell.

Akertown exchanged grim glances, and they said persistently: "When you are going to visit Dell, Mrs. Holby?"

"When is she coming home for a visit?"

"I've written and begged her to come," said Mrs. Holby, but she says Harry can't bear to have her leave him."

"Hm!" said Akertown.

Dell came, however. She had been away nearly two years. So it was a mature Dell who returned. A quiet Dell, too, just as pretty. In fact, prettier, if you took time to look at her face. Akertown, however, hardly saw her features, being charmed by her manner. Such manner! Akertown had never seen such glory of clothes before. Silk stockings, velvet and satin shoes, paradise plumes and alpacas, skirt waists that were no more like Akertown's skirt waists than flowers are like weeds, rings, and gloves. Akertown gasped.

She did not stay long and never left her mother's cottage except to go to the grocery store and butcher-shop. She said pertinently that she came to see her mother, no one else.

"Maybe there's a reason," guessed Akertown shrewdly.

Then her mother went to visit her. She was gone a month. She came back with a peculiar look in her old wistful eyes. "Oh, I had a nice time," she exclaimed, "but I feel more comfortable at home. You see, they live so different."

"I dare say," said Akertown meaningly. "How is Dell's husband?"

"It is awful nice and he thinks everything of me so I do his folks' business," said Mrs. Holby looking around her small cottage. "I don't like to say it, but I'll get used to it after a few visits."

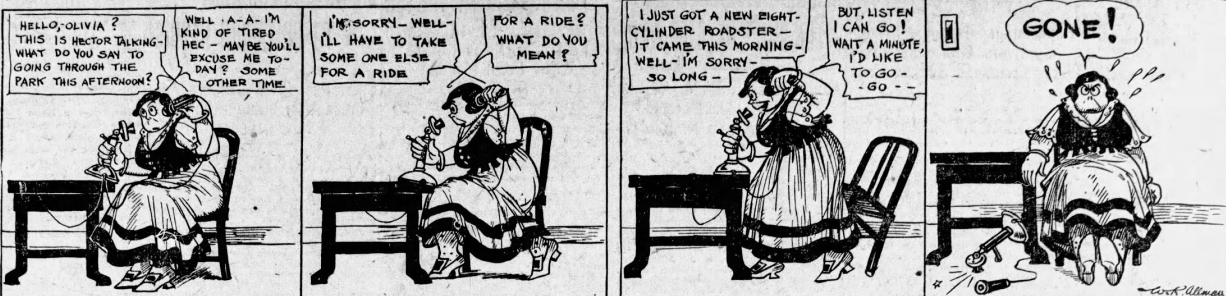

"You won't let on," said Akertown sagely, and Alfred Harkness, son of Akertown's leading citizen, decided to go to Dell and Akertown urged him to look Dell up and send them word.

Not that Akertown had any doubt, but folks wanted to be sure! Alfred agreed. Dell had once slapped his face for trying to hug her. Alfred grinned meanly over the errand.

A week later Alfred wrote. It was a very brief letter. He had told Dell up. She was getting along all right. That was all. His father was angry. "I wonder if the little husky's roped him in!" And, moved by paternal worry, he Alfred was on the train to go to see how Alfred was getting along.

And when he came home his face was very sober.

"What did you find out?" Akertown demanded excitedly.

Alfred's father cleared his throat.

Corn on the cob is the best kind of corn, unless you find it unpleasant to eat. Surely the flavor of corn on the cob cannot be equaled by the flavor of corn prepared in any other way. But corn on the cob becomes monotonous, just as any other delicious constantly served in the same way does. Therefore, it is a wise cook who has at her fingers' tips some other interesting methods of sending corn to the table.

There are the methods of heating up cold corn—and, indeed, almost any made corn dish is as good made of cold corn, extract the rest of the kernels. To two cups of corn add a cup of milk, pepper and salt to taste, a tablespoonful of butter and a half of flour, and two beaten eggs. Fry brown, dropping the batter from a tablespoon. A delicious way to serve corn fritters for luncheon is to cook bacon until it is crisp in a big frying pan, then remove it to a hot platter, and cook the fritters in the hot bacon fat.

Corn soup is another dish to make of the corn from the cob. Never cut clear to the cob, but cut off part of each kernel. Then with the back of a silver knife rub the cob lengthwise to extract the rest of the kernels. To two cups of corn add a cup of milk, pepper and salt to taste, a tablespoonful of butter and a half of flour, and two beaten eggs. Fry brown, dropping the batter from a tablespoon. A delicious way to serve corn fritters for luncheon is to cook bacon until it is crisp in a big frying pan, then remove it to a hot platter, and cook the fritters in the hot bacon fat.

left-over corn. Cut the kernels from the cobs and run them through a vegetable press and then simmer gently with a slice of onion, a sprig of parsley and a pint of water—for two cups of corn—for twenty or thirty minutes. Then add two cups of milk, and thicken with two tablespoonfuls of flour mixed with two tablespoonfuls of water. Season with salt and pepper to taste. This soup should be served very hot.

plinarian and has won not respect, but the warm personal esteem of his old pupils, said Mr. Bale.

CHARGES CONSPIRACY.
Mr. Bale alleged that Mr. Ayer's attack on the school is simply part of a conspiracy to get the institution moved to Macon. He read the rules governing the school in an effort to show that Mr. Ayer had gone about it in the wrong way if he wanted an investigation. By these rules, he said, it is proper first to go to the board of trustees; if no action is obtainable there, to the governor, who appoints the members of the board and has the power to remove them, and only after no satisfaction is obtainable from the governor, to take the matter up with the legislature.

Mr. Bale denied that the school funds had been misappropriated, declaring that the school not only provided an education, food and clothing for deaf and dumb children, but often paid their railroad fare to and from school. He said an appropriation of $45,000 is absolutely necessary to carry on the school work.

Representatives Yomama, of Terrell, and Knight, of Berrien, then spoke, both contending that regardless of the charges, the school should be maintained and an appropriation in order that the school might not go to pieces or be embarrassed financially.

At the conclusion of their remarks, the house adopted the $45,000 appropriation.

Mr. Berrien threw some light on the resolution referred to by Mr. Ayer. He said the house had passed it early in the session, that it had then been referred to the senate, and had been adopted by the senate only Thursday.

The resolution provides for an investigating committee of twelve, from the house and from the senate, each congressional district to be represented, the members of the committee to be named by the speaker of the house and the president of the senate.

President Persons and Speaker Burwell stated the committee will be named Friday afternoon.

Owing to the time taken up by the discussion on the school for the deaf appropriation, the house adjourned Friday but three paragraphs in section 4 of the general appropriations bill. They are as follows: $100,000 for 1915 and $30,000 for 1917 for the academy of the blind at Macon; $15,000 for 1915 and $5,000 for 1917 for the school for the deaf; $25,000 for 1915 and $50,000 for 1917 for the state insane asylum at Milledgeville.

Under a resolution adopted at the opening of Friday's session, the house adjourned until its first Saturday session. Special orders will be taken up, the remainder of the appropriations bill going over to Monday.

Among the bills introduced Friday were two providing for the removal of the state capital to Macon. One, fathered by the Bibb delegation, would amend the state constitution so that any county of municipality may issue bonds for the erection of a capitol building.

The other, by Mr. Fowler of Bibb and seventy other representatives, provides that the voters of the state shall pass on the removal project.

NEW HOUSE BILLS.
The following bills were introduced Friday in the house.

By Mr. Knight, of Berrien—To abolish city court of Nashville.

By Mr. Fowler, of Bibb and 77 other representatives—To refer to the voters of Georgia the removal of the capitol to Macon.

By Mr. Cook, of Telfair—To permit firing of woods between February 1 and March 1.

FUNERAL OF DR. TUPPER HELD IN FEDERAL PRISON

Convicts Pay Silent Tribute to Memory of Chaplain They Loved

Clad in the blue-gray garments of the prison, twelve hundred convicts sat with bowed heads in the chapel of the Atlanta federal penitentiary Friday morning and paid silent tribute to the memory of the chaplain who for fifteen years was their friend and helper.

Dr. Tullius C. Tupper, chaplain of the prison, died last Tuesday in Nashville. It was by special request of his prison "children" that funeral services were conducted there at 10 o'clock Friday morning. Every inmate of the pen was present, besides some three hundred or more people from outside.

The services were very simple. The rostrum was banked high with floral offerings, above them the American flag, the Georgia state flag and the Georgia dead man, and Father James Hickey read a poem, "He Was the Good Shepherd," written by one of the prisoners.

The services lasted only an hour. Then the Knights Templars took charge of the body for interment in West View.

No convict had spoken save in the words of the poem and the splendor of the music by the prison orchestra; but as each filed out of the chapel to his daily task many sobbed and on all was the imprint of a great sorrow.

The Casualties of the War.

Premier Agassiz's statement that British casualties up to July the twentieth, almost the end of the first twelvemonth of the war, amount to 330,995 appears particularly impressive when it is remembered that the British forces now on the European front number fewer than half a million men. The losses of the army are reported at 321,889 and those of the navy at 9,106. The greater part of the army losses for the entire period under review were suffered in France, where they have been especially heavy during the last few months. On April the eleventh the British military casualties to that date were announced to be 139,347. If those figures were correct, the losses in the last fourteen weeks have been 182,542, an average of approximately 13,000 a week. Evidently the fighting along the narrow British front in Flanders and France has been severer than was commonly supposed; and the engagements around the Dardanelles also have been strenuous.

The following table sets forth the military casualties of the British in interesting detail:

KILLED.
	Officers.	Men.
France	1,163	48,372

Great Britain alone among the belligerent issues official statements of this kind. Prussian lists of the killed, wounded and missing are published from time to time at home, but there has been no comprehensive report concerning the German forces as a whole; nor of the French, Russians, Austrians or Italians. It is thus impossible to do more than estimate the aggregate losses of all the Powers engaged in the war. This total has been reckoned at eight millions; and in view of the prodigious size of the Teuton and Russian armies, that figure seems conservative. In their present effort to invest Warsaw the Austro-German forces are said to have lost five hundred thousand men, a number far in excess of the total British casualties for more than eleven months. This estimate is unofficial and may be too high, but undoubtedly the fierce Teuton drives have been made at tremendous cost. Through the greater part of the war so far, the Germans have trusted to swift, heavy strokes, while the Allies, notably the French and the Russians, have conserved their strength at every possible point. Reports from Berlin assert that almost incredibly large numbers of Russians have been captured, but from a broad balancing of accounts it seems that the Russians killed are fewer than the Germans killed.

However this may be, it is evident that all the belligerents have suffered enormously. Eight million men killed or disabled present a war toll that perhaps is unexampled; and this war has not yet run a full year's course.

Optimists would do well to quit thinking about the thermometer and the war.

A large sun spot has been observed, but the present heat will probably knock it off.

Japan seems to be so busy with bribery charges at home that she hasn't time to give to war.

We trust, however, that Germany will not delay sending the note until the police filibuster is over.

The moonshiner is one of those who rejoices in crop diversification and the biggest corn crop the state has ever raised.

The Imperative Need

Of W. and A. Legislation.

If the interests of the Western and Atlantic railroad are to be protected and upheld, the Legislature must act promptly on the pending measures to that end. To defer this issue to the crowded, eleventh hour of the session would be extremely hazardous if not ruinous to the all-important cause at stake. The enemies of the Western and Atlantic are alert, and their main trust is in delay. The friends of the Western and Atlantic must be vigilant and insist upon expeditious action.

Bills to prevent the construction of a privately owned, competing line parallel to the State road have passed the Senate overwhelmingly. They should be pressed to speedy enactment in the House. A bill providing for a competent commission to work out the terms for the next lease of the State road has been perfected and approved by the Western and Atlantic committee. It also should be urged to the earliest possible conclusion. These measures are of vital import to all the counties and the citizens of Georgia. They involve the present safety and the future development of the State's most valuable piece of property. On their enactment depend very largely the earning power, the rental value, and the public revenue of the Western and Atlantic railroad.

If the L. and N. Railway Company is allowed to build a competing line parallel to the Western and Atlantic, as it is seeking to do, the Western and Atlantic will be stripped of its broad traffic connections, robbed of its richest sources of income, reduced to the status of a purely local road, and shorn of its attraction as a leasing proposition. Measures to prevent this disaster, which is not only possible but imminent, should be adopted without delay.

The existing lease of the Western and Atlantic expires in December, 1919. Thus there remain only a few years in which the State can perfect plans for re-leasing the road on a just and advantageous basis. A vast field of business problems must be studied and a vast amount of business negotiations conducted. If this task is to be performed efficiently and to the good fortune of the State, it must be undertaken promptly and must be entrusted to men especially qualified and especially charged with these duties. This will be accomplished by the enactment of the pending bill providing for a Western and Atlantic commission which shall "ascertain, consider and determine," subject to the Legislature's approval, the terms and conditions on which the State road shall be released. This measure, together with the bills designed to protect the Western and Atlantic against a parallel and competing line, is supremely important to public interests. They should be made effective at the present session of the General Assembly, for the perils they are intended to avert and the needs they are intended to serve demand immediate attention.

Opportunity never troubles a man if there is nothing in him.

Colonel J. Lindsay Johnson.

To everyone who knew the kindly and virile character of Colonel J. Lindsay Johnson, the announcement of his death brings a feeling of sorrowful loss. As editor of the Rome Tribune-Herald, he was a distinctive force in Georgia journalism. Always devoted to his community's well-being, he made the Tribune-Herald a spokesman and leader in forward movements; and he made it also a power in the political affairs of his district and of the State. To Colonel Johnson, Democracy was far more than a party name. It was a personal faith, an ideal of government, a vital human principle to which he dedicated all the energy of his mind and all the loyalty of his heart.

He was an earnest worker for the party's interests in the State and was no less keenly interested in the national fortunes. It was in recognition of this good service and of his inherent ability that the President appointed him to a responsible post in the administrative affairs of the Philippines. When Colonel Johnson left Georgia about a year ago to assume his new duties, he was in vigorous health, and his friends bade him goodbye with an expectation of welcoming him home again. The news of his death across the Pacific comes as a peculiar shock. He will be remembered by his fellow Georgians as a man who loved the State and labored for its upbuilding, a man who was genial and generous, always true to his friends and loyal to his own high sense of honor and right.

But the woman with the greatest command of language is the one who knows when to shut up.

Editorial Echoes

Bioraphers of General Sir John Denton Pinkstone French, commander of the British army, say he was born at Ripple Vale, Kent, in 1852. Randolph F. Cummins informs me that French is neither an Irishman nor an Englishman, but an American; that he was born near Richmond, Va.; that his father was a colonel in Lee's army and was killed at Fredericksburg. "He was still a small boy when the Civil war ended, and was then sent to a relative in England," said Mr. Cummins, who makes the further direct statement: "French's sisters lived in the same house with my sisters for twenty years. I think one of my sisters still lives in Washington." An officer high in the United States service, in whose word I place all confidence, vouches for Mr. Cummins' general reliability. That is as far as I can go with the supposed Americanism of General French.—Gerard in the Public Ledger.

During a recent air raid on the northeast coast a workshop was so badly shaken by a bomb that all the dust on rafters, traveling cranes, etc., began to fall. A cry of "Gas!" was raised and a stampede began. But an old Irishman cried: "I'd rather be poisoned than run away from them fellows!" He wrapped his coat round his head and lay down where he was. When the scare was over and the men returned, they found him still there, fast asleep.—London Outlook.

Study Your Forehead.

By H. ADDINGTON BAUGH.

HE next time you are in front of a mirror take a good look at your forehead.

Notice especially its breadth, height, and slope. These will give you indications of value in helping you recognize your shortcomings, the weak spots against which you need to be on guard.

Observation by many close students of physiognomy have left no doubt that the forehead is an excellent index to character, and that certain foreheads are usually associated with certain types of mind.

Generally speaking, the higher the forehead, the greater will be the natural mental power. The lower the forehead, the greater need for careful training to develop the mind.

Says Froebke, one of the foremost exponents of modern scientific physiognomy:

"A low, narrow forehead, with sunken temples, will carry with it narrowness of view, obstinacy of purpose, an anxiety to adhere to beaten paths, a lack of interest in, almost an aversion to, new ideas."

"It indicates a person inclined to be tactless and opinionated, lacking in diplomacy, constant in affection, but often inclined to nag those who are dearest, rather than fond of finding fault, practical to an extreme."

"A low, flat, wide forehead shows one who lacks in imagination, benevolence, reverence, executive ability, knowledge of human nature; has poor comparative power; has plenty of conceit and self-confidence; is strongly energetic, but his efforts are frequently so misdirected as to be wasted."

On the other hand, a person fortunate in the possession of a broad, high forehead, sloping gently back, need to take warning if he finds his forehead smooth and unmarked.

This indicates that he is not using his mind as he can and should use it. The man who thinks hard always has a wrinkled forehead, the result of the muscular contractions accompanying concentration of thought.

Unwrinkled forehead also indicates sometimes a depraved selfishness of nature, to be overcome only by earnest cultivation of disregard for the small and selfish things of life, and keen interest in whatever is broadening and ennobling.

If the forehead rises almost straight up, the nature is likely cold and sluggish. A need is thereby indicated for the development, through self-training, of keener sensitiveness to the slightest thought and action. A forehead which bulges strongly above the eyes testifies to mental and physical energy. But it also indicates a tendency to certain temperamental defects.

To quote the author Froebke again:

"It indicates one who is quick to think and apt to jump to conclusions which are usually correct, but it shows a lack of ability to reason, to cause and effect, or to think out and formulate a well-aid plan."

"It shows a keenly observant person, inventive, fond of science, gifted with intuitive judgment of human nature, but lacking in imagination and idealism."

When, however, there is a marked bulging, not of the lower part of the forehead, but of the upper, there is a danger that the mind may be over-developed, fancy and feeling predominating over the dictates of logical reasoning.

But if, instead of a bulge, the whole upper forehead is symmetrically and evenly curved, it usually indicates a person inclined to be ardent, hopeful, and energetic.

Quoting a person needs, perhaps, to develop his critical powers—though never to such an extent as to deaden his natural optimism.

That indeed is a precious gift, the possession of which means much to him and to all associated with him.

The Journal's Letter Box

East Point, Ga., July 26, 1915.

Hon. James R. Gray, Editor Atlanta Journal.

Dear Sir—Your editorial on compulsory education as stated in today's edition of The Journal strikes a sympathetic chord and sounds a clarion call for free books in the public schools. There can be no satisfactory enforcement of child labor laws without compulsory education. There can be no compulsory education without free books.

If the parents of every school child would donate the books now in their possession to the board of public education, there would be no bartering of books among the various bookstores. Every grade in every school would hold the books left by the outgoing class and deliver them to the incoming class. The only expense would be the replacing of worn-out copies, these being purchased by the school board. The cost could be obtained without the dealer's necessary profit.

Every pupil should be held responsible for the books he or she holds, and the buying or selling of such books by any persons except the board of education would be an illegal act and liable to a heavy fine.

There are thousands of volumes of books lying away on shelves in our homes that should be in the school buildings for the use of pupils.

Every student must face squarely the law of compulsory education. It is in keeping with the progress of the state and her increasing population. If the states of New York and Pennsylvania did not compel their children to attend school, they would in a few years be in control of an illiterate, foreign-speaking, emigrant people.

The people of Georgia should be aroused to this momentous question, and her lawmakers consider seriously and act firmly towards establishing a law for compulsory education and free school books.

Yours very cordially,

MRS. W. JOSEPH HUBBARD.

I Wonder.

"When stars go out, I wonder where they go?
I wonder where the flowers get their smell?
I wonder what the talking squirrels tell,
And what the quiet, shiny fishes know."

From dawn to eve, but most when lights are low
And sunset rays and vapor veer their spell—
I wonder how the small birds fly so well,
And why the wind that rustles the birds' wings won't blow me, too, up through the far green tops of trees!

All day "I wonder"—faintly as a prayer—
"I wonder," and her deep eyes, unregarded,
Study the light of evening, and the breeze,
As lips, half open, murmur to the air:
The tremulous "I wonder of mankind!"

—Herman Hagedorn in The Outlook

The Searchlight.

The existence of an astronomical observatory with scientific instruments of reliable accuracy over two centuries before Christ was proved by the archeological investigations carried on last year at Merne, the ancient capital of Ethiopia, located in southern Nubia on the River Nile.

The remains of an old observatory have been discovered, and on the walls are astronomical observations and calculations recorded in ancient script, which is readily intelligible to the modern scientist. These fragments, or wall pictures, show sketches of the transit instrument, and something which could easily be used as the azimuth instrument, known to modern astronomers.

This old city was once one of the great capitals of the world, the center of the wealth of Ethiopia. It was powerful during the period between 600 B. C. and 300 A. D., after which it was practically deserted, and has been in total oblivion for more than a thousand years. In addition to the astronomical apparatus are evidences of the existence of other sciences and arts. The wall pictures indicate an accurate system of drawing, superior to that of ancient Egypt. The heaviest of the dead was evidently practiced, as the ancient cemetery has been found, its flues and hearth in good condition, the floor littered with partly burned bones.

DRUG FARMING

By FREDERICK B. BARKER.

IF all the markets which felt the shock of the European war, none experienced more sudden and startling fluctuations than that for drugs. Except among the producers and dealers, the rise in drug prices attracted comparatively little attention, for few persons know anything about the American drug industry. Nevertheless, the prices of some drugs advanced as much as 50 or 700 per cent when the European importations were cut off by intense excitement in trade circles. Drug men believed that there was to be a positive drug famine, and that they were to be the beneficiaries of the situation at any price. The immediate result was a propaganda for the raising of drugs in this country, the promoters of which did not stop to consider whether such an enterprise would really be a profitable one for the general farmer.

As a result of this propaganda there are now in the United States a few well-managed farms devoted entirely to the production of medicinal plants, and there are a large number of persons who fondly expect to make fortunes by raising drugs in their back yards, or even by gathering weeds on their farms, and who will probably be easily disillusioned by the smallness of the returns which they will receive for their labor.

It cannot be too strongly emphasized that the demand for most crude drugs is extremely limited, as compared with other agricultural products; that wide technical knowledge and great care are necessary for their successful production, and that for all these reasons the opportunity, which is now in vogue in any case for organized enterprises rather than for the small producer, seeking a profitable side line.

As a result of the propaganda for the raising of drugs in this country which followed the outbreak of the European war, thousands of letters have reached the department of agriculture from persons who wished to enter upon the raising of medicinal plants, on a small scale and as a side line. Yet it is estimated that if two men in each state in the union were successful in raising a drug to the value of a number of common drug plants, the demand for them would be fully supplied.

The best index to the demand for any given product is the amount of it that is annually imported. This amount necessarily shows how much the demand in this country exceeds the supply, and therefore the amount that must be imported for the purpose of production. Horehound is a medicinal herb the cultivation of which has been strongly recommended as a profitable side line for farmers and gardeners. Under good conditions, a ton of the dried herb may be produced upon an acre. The annual importation of dried horehound seldom exceeds fifty or seventy tons. In a word, if sixty or seventy acres in this country were planted in horehound, the demand would be fully supplied. Thus, one fair-sized farm is all that the trade would support, while two or three of them would make the market and lower the price until the plant could not be raised at a profit at all.

The belief that fabulous prices are paid for dried drug plants is responsible for many of the hopeless ventures in drug farming. Thus, it may be correctly stated that the average price per pound for such plants, and that many of them may be produced at the rate of a ton to the acre. Naturally, the prospective investor calculates that he will raise the more expensive plants at a profit of $2 or $3 a pound. Counting chickens before they are hatched is not in it as a fascinating occupation compared with figuring the possible profits from an acre in medicinal plants.

A glance at the price list of any dealer in crude drugs reveals the interesting fact, however, that about 90 per cent of the average price per pound is paid to the collectors for crude drugs, and that these prices are subject to the most remarkable fluctuations. Thus a drug plant might be bringing a high price per pound because of its devoted entirety to the raising of medicinal plants. The arrival of a single shipment of that drug from Europe might force the market down 50 per cent, while, if a sudden frost began the cultivation of it, a few years would suffice to swamp the market.

Furthermore, the drug farmer should take into account in raising drug plants that he is competing with cheap labor both in Europe and in this country. In Europe drug plants can be raised at a much lower cost than in this country, while in the United States there is a reliable source of supply of a large number of crude drugs in the mountain regions of West Virginia, Tennessee and the Carolinas, where the wild herbs are gathered by the mountaineers.

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

It was said of Matthew Arnold that in all the literature of his country he was the most cultivated of delicacy. "A finely touched nature," he said, "will respect in itself the sense of delicacy not less than the sense of honesty."

Delicacy is no virtue; it is the flavor of all the virtues.

It is not goodness; it is goodness filtered through modesty.

It is the gentle hand of the courageous heart. It is the quality without which the most efficient man cannot be a gentleman, and the most accomplished woman cannot be a lady.

It cannot be learned; it must be assimilated. The lack of delicacy has spoiled many a man's career. It is so great an element of weakness in a crisis as a certain coarseness.

Most fallen American idols owe their collapse to the fact that in some crucial moment they offended the delicacy of the public.

These things are fatal to delicacy: Egotism. All thrusting forward of one's self, unguessed, an air of self-sufficiency, a dictatorial manner, a brusqueness, a meanness, the consummate flower of good breeding is humility, not assumed but felt.

It is the esteem of success, particularly when it implies possessions or fame. This argues gross worldliness of character and lack of appreciation of the nobler human qualities.

Selfishness, whether seeking the best meats at the table, the best seat in the room, and such lapses of the common sort, or the vulgar desire of monopolizing the conversation, or making one's self conspicuous by over-dressing or jewelry.

Inscrutability. This is the besetting sin of writers who desire popularity at any cost. "The slightest deviation from the line of clear conviction," writes Mr. G. W. E. Russell, "the least turning to left or right in order to make a prejudicial or plausible audience or flatter a class, shows a want of delicacy, a preference of present favor to permanent respect."

Lightly causing suffering in others. "Ah," said Rivalro, "no one considers how much pain any man of taste has to suffer before he inflicts any."

Yielding toward the vulgar. This respect for the feelings of servants. Pawning upon or cringing toward superiors.

Satisfaction with surroundings that are ugly, uncouth, and devoid of taste.

All good qualities have a line which they may not pass beyond, else they become absurd. The danger point in delicacy is becoming finicky, Miss Nancy's estimate.

This does not alter the fact, however, that a certain amount of womanliness makes the complete man. The will of such a man is gloved in civility, courtesy, and strong courage must be tempered with kindness, wisdom must be suffused with modesty, conviction must be balanced with tolerance.

Delicacy is "to make virtue victorious by practicing it attractively."

Women and children extensively engage in the work. It is difficult for a farmer, paying high rates for his labor, to compete with these gatherers of wild herbs. As soon as the supply exceeds the demand the farmer will necessarily be under a large number of planters.

Considerable experience is necessary both to find and to identify the herbs that can be profitably gathered in the wild state, and, after they are gathered, to find a good market is not an easy matter. The propaganda for the production of medicinal plants in this country led many persons to believe that the gathering of wild herbs growing wild upon their farms. Thus, horehound, a common weed growing wild in many parts of the United States, has a certain amount of medicinal value. A lady in New England who owned a large country place wrote to the department of agriculture about her experience in trying to place horehound upon the market. She read various publications about the high medicinal value of this herb which grew wild upon her farm in large quantities. Determined not to neglect what seemed an easy opportunity, she wrote to several manufacturers who used horehound in their product and to one man who advertised the crude drug for sale. Both of the manufacturers replied that they obtained their material in an advanced state of preparation and were not interested in the collection of the crude drug. The third man, who lived in a nearby city, replied that he obtained all of the plant which he could use from a convenient source and was not in the market to purchase any. Further investigation of this dealer revealed the fact that he lived not far from the lady's farm and was, in fact, accustomed to gathering his horehound in her back pasture.

In one article on drug farming, silver cinchona was described as a drug plant which grows in the mountains of America, but which thrives in the country, especially in Pennsylvania. It was represented as a drug used largely by eye specialists, and the implication was that this use created a steady demand for the plant. Silver cinchona, as a matter of fact, is a rather common medicinal plant in this country, generally known as "daisy miller." It is a drug of very low value, and its use, being employed only to a very limited extent by homeopaths. Each fall enough of it is cut and thrown away by the park rangers of many cities to supply the demand for a few years.

This is the dark side of the picture, and perhaps the one that needs most emphasis. A wrong impression with regard to the possibilities of drug farming has been widely disseminated. It is by no means true, however, that there is no opportunity for profits in the raising of medicinal plants. It is true, but in mind that these plants are not staple crops, the demand for them is limited, that the prices are subject to the most unexpected fluctuations, and that wide technical knowledge is necessary for their successful cultivation and preparation for the market. If all these factors are taken into account, however, and if one is prepared to make a thorough study of the subject, drug farming may be a profitable commercial enterprise.

The small producer might prosper by raising some plant which there was an obvious scarcity provided he was a patient and skillful gardener and knew how to dry and pack his product after it was grown. Even then, however, the collector, importer, or other cause, might destroy the market for his product before he could sell it. Furthermore, about the only way he could reach a market would be by sending his product to some dealer who would accept it, and then he would have to give. Thus, although fair, or even large, profits might be made by a small producer if he were conversant with his business, there are many other side lines which would give a more adequate and certain return for the time and money invested.

The possibilities of successful drug farming may be best appreciated by considering some of the more substantial enterprises in this line. In Virginia, not far from Washington, for example, there is a farm of forty-five acres devoted entirely to the raising of medicinal plants. It is owned by several men of scientific training, and is adequately financed. The proprietors of this unique farm know all of the hundreds of plants which have medicinal value. They watch the market and are able to make a shrewd guess as to which ones it will be most profitable to raise. They are sure of the value of different medicinal herbs as they are sure of realizing a handsome profit on some of their crops, which will more than overbalance a possible loss on others. With the cultivation of medicinal plants, the preparation for the market are done in a thoroughly scientific manner. This, and adequate financial backing, might be named as the chief requisites for successful drug farming.

QUIPS AND QUIDDITIES

Hall—Blythe is a pretty optimistic character.

Wall—I should say so. If he failed in business he'd thank heaven he had his health; if he failed in health he'd thank heaven he had his business, and if he failed in both he'd say there was no use in having one without the other.

"Father," said Willie, "I want to write a war poem and I can't think of a rhyme for Preliminary. Would 'weasel' do?"

"I don't know, my son," replied the pater. "But I'm old-fashioned and I'm spending just as little as I can. Nobody knows the difference."

The Yale freshman year was proving very expensive to father, so father decided to have a "heart to heart" talk with Johnny, home for the week end. "Now, my son," said he, gravely but affectionately, "your mother and I are spending just as little as we possibly can. I get up in the morning at half past 6 and I work until after 5. But, son, the money just won't go round at the rate that your expenses are running. Now, I ask you, as one man to another, what do you think we had better do?"

For a moment Johnny's head was buried in thought—and then he replied:

"Well, father, I don't see any way out but for you to work nights."

Enthusiastic Aviator (after long explanation of principle and workings of his biplane)—Now you understand it, don't you?
Young Lady—All right, one thing.
Aviator—And that is—?
Young Lady—What makes it stay up?

NOW NO TIME TO CHANGE GEOGRAPHY, SAYS GRIGGS

European War Will Necessitate Change Later On, He Declares

Barle E. GRIGGS, one of the petitioners for injunction against the board of education, restraining them from changing the Fry geography, now in use in the schools, for the Tarr-Murray geography, said today that he adopted by the board at a recent meeting, in a communication to the board, states that he takes his stand against the change on economic and legal grounds.

"Mr. Griggs states that the proposed change will have a tendency to make education a luxury which is already out of the reach of some, and is rapidly getting beyond the reach of others. He says that the change will involve a considerable additional expenditure by the pupils and contends that the Fry geography, which has been in use for six years, be continued for a few years more."

"The war in Europe, he claims, will render any present geography inadequate and any supplements later issued by the publishers will mark an additional cost that will necessitate the pupils' 'unlearning' what they have just been through."

"Mr. Griggs appends an opinion from Attorney James L. Mayson, to the effect that such a change now could not be readily adopted."

Judge George L. Bell issued a temporary injunction restraining the board from making the proposed change. The case will receive a hearing before him on August 10.

"The war," he said, "has continued, while there has been great extent a cessation of enthusiasm in the relief work. We can use almost any kind of clothing which good Georgians will do, any kind of food, any kind of help."

Gov. Harris Meets Man Who Shot at Him Sixteen Times

During his campaign for the governorship last year, Colonel Nat E. Harris addressed the voters at Cornelia, Ga. In the audience was a gray-haired gentleman whose erect shoulders and military bearing proclaimed the old soldier. After his address Colonel Harris sought him out and had a talk.

It developed that the man, Colonel L. C. Wade, a prominent citizen of Cornelia, was in the Union army during the war, fighting in the line which opposed the Sixteenth Virginia regiment, of which Colonel Harris was an officer. "Were you at the battle of Moorefield?" asked Colonel Harris.

"Yes," said Colonel Wade. "I was doing picket duty on the upper wing at the extreme end."

"You don't say so?" exclaimed Colonel Harris. "Do you remember seeing a man saddle a roan horse, jump on her and dash away?"

"Do?" chimed in Colonel Wade. "Why, I shot at that man sixteen times, and missed him every shot."

"It's a good thing you did," said Colonel Harris, "for that man wouldn't be talking to you now."

That was the incident which led to a

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 30.—Impeachment charges filed against John Purifyoy, secretary of state, by Bradley C. Brown, of Birmingham, were read in the house today and referred to the committee on judiciary with instructions to report on the next legislative day, or as soon thereafter as possible. It is charged Purifyoy paid $1,000 to J. H. Nunnallee to withdraw from the race for secretary of state and did not make an accounting of it in his expense account, according to law.

And now that the one is governor of his state he is planning to appoint the man who shot at him sixteen times on his staff.

"Lefty" Roth, Cracker Find Roth's Benders Hard to Solve

In Only One Round Can Smith-men Get Counters Over on Youngster-Kelly Due to Work for Crackers Today

LITTLE ROCK, July 30.—"Lefty" Roth, a youngster who was tried out by the Travelers early in the season and sent to the South Atlantic league for further seasoning, worked for Manager Starr in the second game of the season. The youngster proved to be one for the visitors, and the locals gained the break on the series thus far. The Travelers landed the home game by a score of 3 to 2.

In only one round were the Crackers able to get a hit against the young pitcher. Even in that inning an error helped the visitors in their scoring. This was the second round, Manning beat out an infield put, Kauffman struck out, but Jennings drew a home run. Roth and Jennings along to second. Manning and Jennings pulled a double steal, but Gibson would have potted the former at third. Roth and Jennings led the throw get away from him. Manning counted. Captain Bismarck smashed a single to center and Jennings counted.

Except for this one round the Crackers never were able to get a hit against the young pitcher. In the last three innings they got men on, but in each instance the youngster tightened up. In the eighth inning he got a hit, but in the eighth and ninth he struck out the tying man. Roth, who was in the box, was in the box in the eighth and ninth. It was in the eighth and ninth that it was Eddie McDonald.

While Roth was holding the Crackers, the Travelers were getting on. Captain Thompson gradually. They exacted their first toll off him in the opening. Roth, with two men on, was hit. Thomas Takes Lead in Homers

Pelican Third Sacker, Has Made Nine Circuit Wallops.
Only Batter to Hit Two in One Game

NEW ORLEANS, July 30.—Freddie Thomas, Pelican third baseman, stands almost an even dozen of equalling the home run record—fifteen—established for Southern league sluggers last season by "Buddy" Jacobson, now with the Detroit Tigers.

Monday, Freddie forwarded his ninth circuit clout of the campaign to Gray Bismarck's office. He also passed "Red" McDermott, of Memphis, for long-distance hitting honors, and owns an average of a home run per game for the last four games.

In completing the circuit twice at the expense of Chattanooga hurlers, Thomas is the first Southern leaguer to accomplish this feat in a year. Last season, Brice, of the Braves, was the only man to do this. Last season, Brice, of the Braves, was the only man to do this.

Unlike Roth's two hits or those from other batters, however, Thomas has had to depend on his speed to get home run paths and safely at the expense of the bases. Most home run drivers are over the pickets, but probably six of those owned by Freddie are inside the grounds.

Thomas may and may not equal Jacobson's record this season, but one thing is sure. He is a backstop, particularly those of the Kitchens type, will pay a little more for the high speed of the bases. He is a backstop, particularly those of the Kitchens type, will pay a little more for the high speed of the bases.

Diamond Notes

Pat Han draws credit for winning a double-header for the Braves against the Pirates. The former Brooklyn Blues was pulled through an easy winner in the first game by a score of 10 to 5. In the second, relieved George Davis and the Reds had scored a four-run lead on the Harvard had in the second inning. The Braves came from behind and won in the seventh inning.

Walter Johnson won his one game while the Cleveland Indians in the third round. With the score tied, Johnson drove to deep center field and hit a home run. The crowd was wild. Johnson drove to deep center field and hit a home run. The crowd was wild.

Home Wagner took a considerable part in the defeat of the Dodgers by the Pirates. With the score 4 to 2 in favor of the Pirates in the eighth, Home came to bat. He hit a home run. The crowd was wild.

BALL PLAYERS DEVELOP MANY TRICKS ON BASE LINES

There are perhaps more tricks worked on and upon base runners than there are in any department of baseball. The 360 feet around diamond are filled with pitfalls and handouts that make the game a game of wits. The pitcher's job is to make a game of wits. The pitcher's job is to make a game of wits.

The batter drives a ball to left center field. If he does not get away from the plate quickly the catcher will spring in close to him, put his hand to hamper the throw of him, and try to hamper the start.

He swings out onto the edge of the bag and upon a fly. The catcher is first base without losing much ground. The first baseman remains on the inside corner of the bag, or near it, giving the runner just room enough to pass, and trying to force him to take a wide turn.

The pitcher, if he is speedy enough, will try to cut across in front of the runner to throw him off his stride. Both the second baseman and the shortstop will hamper him at second, one by the catcher's squaring in the line, and the other by trying to force him to make a still wider turn.

The third baseman holds him and the catcher takes the outside route and a wide swing and even then the shortstop will cut across him. The catcher will be close to him, put his hand to hamper the throw of him, and try to hamper the start.

Not one of the men actually interferes with or touches the runner but he has to earn every foot of ground. The pitcher, if he is speedy enough, will try to cut across in front of the runner to throw him off his stride. Both the second baseman and the shortstop will hamper him at second, one by the catcher's squaring in the line, and the other by trying to force him to make a still wider turn.

INCREASE WEIGHT

Good Advice for Thin Folks

The trouble with most thin folks who wish to gain weight is that they insist on drugging their stomach or stuffing it with greasy foods; rubbing on useless "fish cream," or following some foolish physical culture stunt, while the real cause of thinness goes untouched. You cannot get fat until your digestive tract assimilates the food you eat.

Thanks to a remarkable new scientific discovery, it is now possible to combine in a simple form the very elements needed by the di-active organs to help them convert food into energy. This master-stroke of modern chemistry is called Sargol, and is termed the greatest of flesh-builders. Sargol aims through its regenerative, reconstructive action to give you new and better muscles. It literally soaks up the fattening elements of your food and pass them into the blood where they are used to build new muscle, bone, skin, cell and tissue of your body. You can readily picture the result when this amazing transmutation takes place. Your neck and shoulders, your cheeks fill out, hollows about your neck, shoulders and bust disappear and you take on the appearance of a young man. Sargol is absolutely harmless, inexpensive, efficient. Jacobs Pharmacy and other leading drugstores of Atlanta and vicinity have it available. Refund your money if you are not satisfied, as per the guarantee found in every package.

Caution:—While Sargol has given excellent results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and

General stomach troubles it should not be taken by those who do not wish to gain ten pounds or more.—(Adv.)
